THE DISGRACEFUL CENSUS.

Judging the Federal count of the population of New York with the utmost consideration possible, it must be regarded as a disgracefully careless affair, since 200,000 people escaped the attention of the enumerators. Thus looked at, even in the most favorable light, it was a shameful bit

But in the light of several circumstances which must be considered in connection with the Federal Census it is open to the gravest suspicion. It seems from the statement of Mr. MURRAY, who had personal charge of the count in this city, that after the returns had been forwarded to Washington, the Bureau of Census published officially a population less by over one hundred thousand than that which the enumerators had made out and sent to the Bureau.

The positive insolence of Mr. Childs's ling discrepancy, and Mr. Postes's insensibility to the strong need of some official action to determine the correct the time her book appears. figures, are quite in keeping with the suspicion which many cool-headed citizens entertain that the inaccuracy of the Federal count was anything but carelessness. If there is fraud here, it is an atrocious one.

THOSE SCHOOL GATES.

It is pretty hard that a measure which has so much to recommend it as that of the earlier opening of the school gates should not be acted on for weeks after it has been suggested to the authorities.

There is every reason why the children should not be kept standing in the street, itself like a beautiful sunset into pale lilac and there is no apparent reason why they should. Yet they are still kept there.

These dull, rainy days recall more vividly to the mind the inconveniences to which these ungrown, delicate children are subjected by this irrational barring of

There is every excuse for the children gathering at the school gates at the time Even if they came of their own impulse it should be a gratifying thing to see such alacrity on their part to go to school. But there are many strong reasons which make their early presence there a necessity.

When will the simple justice be done them of opening the gates and letting them in? Let us hope it will not be too long deferred.

A BOY SUICIDE.

When a boy sixteen years old kills himself there must be something radically wrong somewhere. The case of young TURFIE, who was found hanging from a skylight in his tenement vesterday afternoon, causes this reflection.

A long series of disasters or bad luck may seem to excuse in some measure the man whose hopes and prospects are exhausted. But what is to be thought of a Lahel is thoroughly acquainted with all the Gordian knot of life? What kind of own assaying, and is superintendent of her training must be have had? Two men now charge him and his partner, Wooan, with having brutally assaulted them in the resort of Tom's on Bixth avenue. It is time that Mr. Tom Goven should get his deserts. Such a character is a nuisance in a community and should be suppressed if he will not nowned through the country. The repentcontrol himself.

There are happy marriages where both parties are of the same age; happy ones where the wife is the senior; but, the happiest marriages are those where the husband is the senior, for he should be one who can be looked up to for a guide as well as friend, lover and husband. This the clock has sounded ton;
When it dawns upon her sight.
He is just like other men;
When she wants a Winter sacque.
And he dares to raise a row.
And she dares to saive night back,
Will she love him then as now!
